COMMENTARY & ANALYSIS ON INDONESIAN POLITICS AND ECONOMICS

INSIDE ISSUE VI / 7:

FROM THE EDITOR	3
ELECTION 2004:	4
And the Winner Will Be...
With the presidential elections just a fortnight away, the Van Zorge Report examines the results of two of the most recent and comprehensive surveys predicting the likely outcome of the July 5 presidential election.
INTERVIEW: DR SUBROTO	11
“The Impetus for Investment in the Exploration of New Reserves is Very Low”
Few people in the country, and perhaps the world, can claim the unique perspective of the global oil and gas industry as Dr. Subroto. The Van Zorge Report recently met with Subroto to gain insight into Indonesia’s decline as an oil producing country and the key factors driving global oil prices.
ELECTION SECURITY	15
Risks of Civil Unrest in the Run-up to the Presidential Election
The July 5th election promises to be a politically heated race as the five presidential candidates drum up support for their tickets To assess the risks of civil unrest during this campaign season, The Executive Network—an exclusive association of national and multinational corporate leaders under the aegis of Van Zorge, Heffernan and Associates—invited a group of eminent political observers and student activists to assess the potential for turbulence during the presidential campaign period.
A TIME BOMB FOR GLOBAL TRADE: MICHAEL RICHARDSON	18
Maritime-related Terrorism in an Age of Weapons of Mass Destruction
Is sea container shipping and its land links in the global supply chain vulnerable to a major terrorist attack? Many officials in the United States, Asia and Europe believe so.
