Promises, Promises—Overview of the Platforms of the Leading Presidential Challengers
Campaign platforms and promises, do they really matter? In many respects, all five presidential hopefuls stand for similar ideals. But a closer examination of their platforms would reveal distinctions in their personal outlooks as leaders. In this edition of the Van Zorge Report, we outline the basic platforms of the three leading rivals to the incumbent—Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, Amien Rais and Wiranto—along with their key political speeches to allow readers and voters to get a more substantial understanding of these potential presidents.

Economic Policy in 2004: What Direction Are We Heading?
With the country's leaders wrapped up in electoral matters, there is a growing concern that economic programs and reforms will become an afterthought for the remainder of the year. To answer these concerns, The Executive Network—a peer advisory group under the aegis of Van Zorge, Heffernan & Associates—invited two top-level officials to directly elaborate on this matter.
US FOREIGN POLICY EFFECT: DANIEL LINDGREN	23
An Overall Negative Opinion Across the World
As part of the Voice of the People annual survey, TNS Indonesia carried out a major opinion poll commissioned by Gallup International at the end of 2003. A total of 1,017 face-to-face interviews were conducted in urban centers around Indonesia. This survey was part of a global initiative to measure the effect of U.S. foreign policy in 52 countries in the world including 10 countries in the Asia Pacific region.
